THE LOWITJA INSTITUTE POSTGRADUATE RESEARCH SCHOLARSHIPS 2011

REGISTRATION OF INTEREST

In 2011 the Institute will offer Scholarships to eligible students interested in doing postgraduate research in Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander health settings.

Any student already enrolled, or satisfying admission requirements to enrol in 2011, in the Cooperative Research Centre for Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander Health's Essential Participant institutions:

- Charles Darwin University
- The University of Queensland
- Queensland Institute of Medical Research
- The University of Melbourne
- Flinders University
- La Trobe University
- Menzies School of Health Research

Scholarships will be available for research relevant to the areas outlined below. Interest may be registered for more than one area.

a) Specified research themes in Program 3:

  - Stewardship Dialogue – one of a series of projects investigating feasible approaches and barriers to the articulation and development of enduring government responsibilities in Indigenous health; and policy and program implementation approaches that are underpinned by evidence-based methods of engagement and partnership with Indigenous communities, organizations and families and individuals.
  - Funding and Accountability – evaluation of trials of improved contracting between funders and Aboriginal Community Controlled Health Services (ACCHs) contributing to the growing global evidence of effective use of alliance contracting between the public sector and NGOs and/or private sector. It will engage with partners in government and the ACCHs sector (and other PHC providers) to evaluate the costs and benefits of alternative contracting models in use.

b) The focus of Program 2 – Healthy communities and settings:
   • Strengthening the capacity of local communities and organizations to develop interventions that address the determinants of health across a range of local sectors and settings

c) The major theme areas of Program 3 – Enabling policy and systems:
   • Health policy and program effectiveness - efficiency and effectiveness of decision-making and policy and program planning and implementation by governments
   • Indigenous health workforce - capacity, composition and structure of the Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander health workforce
   • Organisational effectiveness in health care for Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander people – including Aboriginal Community Controlled Health Services and other health care providers.

Registration form and further information about the scholarships and the Lowitja Institute research programs 2 and 3 are available at: <www.lowitja.org.au>.

For further information about completing the Registration of Interest form, please contact the Research Training Officer, Diane Walker, at <diane.walker@lowitja.org.au>, or T: 08 89467 758.

Registrations of interest will be accepted up to COB 31 January 2011.

WELCOME DR SANCHIA SHIBASAKI AS TORRES STRAIT ISLANDER REPRESENTATIVE TO THE LOWITJA INSTITUTE BOARD

We are pleased to inform you that Dr Sanchia Shibasaki has been appointed as a Torres Strait Islander representative to the Lowitja Institute Board. Sanchia is Executive Manager of the Population Health Unit at the Kimberley Aboriginal Medical Services Council, and many of you will remember her as a former CRCAH Research Fellow.

Dr Sanchia Shibasaki is of Torres Strait Islander descent and has more than 15 years’ experience in Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander health and health research. She has clinical experience working as a physiotherapist in Far North Queensland and the Torres Strait and Northern Peninsula Area. Her research includes completing a Masters degree in Applied Epidemiology in Indigenous Health and working with the Central Australian Aboriginal Congress in Alice Springs as the CRC for Aboriginal Health Research Fellow. Dr Shibasaki has since completed a Doctorate of Philosophy in Epidemiology, Population Health and Health Services at the Australian Primary Health Care Research Institute, Australian National University.

Dr Shibasaki was awarded a National Health and Medical Research Council Training Fellowship to explore knowledge translation in primary health care services, later withdrawing from the program to return to primary health care service delivery.

This appointment completes the Lowitja Institute permanent board with Ms Pat Anderson as Chair; Ms Stephanie Bell, a director of the Central Australian Aboriginal Congress and former CRCAH Board member; Professor Peter Buckskin, the Dean and Head of School of the David Unaipon College of Indigenous Education and Research at the University of South Australia; Professor Lisa Rae Jackson Pulver, the inaugural Chair of Indigenous Health and Professor of Public Health at the University of New South Wales; Mr Robin Lonergan, a corporate lawyer and partner at Brisbane-based firm Macrossans Lawyers; and Dr Louise Morauta, a long-serving senior federal bureaucrat who, following her retirement, was appointed to the Australian Capital Territory Human Research Ethics Committee in January 2010. We invite you to read more about them on our website at <www.lowitja.org.au/lowitja-institute-board>.

ABORIGINAL AND TORRES STRAIT ISLANDER CANCER ROUNDTABLE OUTCOMES

The National Roundtable on Priorities for Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander Cancer Research that met on Friday 3 December brought together for the first time almost 50 representatives from national, State and Territory cancer organisations, major cancer-treating hospitals, cancer survivors and representatives from the Aboriginal community controlled primary health care sector in an effort to maximise the impact of current and future Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander cancer research. The roundtable was hosted by the Lowitja Institute, and supported by the Queensland Institute of Medical Research.

The meeting urged greater coordination, collaboration and strategic direction from those working on research in Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander cancer, and the adoption of a research agenda driven by the priorities of Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander people.

Other research priorities identified included identifying ways to improve the patient journey, evaluation and wider adoption of models of care that work, and using systems approaches to improve cultural safety at all levels of cancer care.

By the close of the roundtable a number of areas for action had been agreed to including:

• Holding a bi-annual meeting to share knowledge about cancer and Indigenous people across research, service provider and community sectors.
• The establishment of a portal where all sectors can access research done to date, underway or planned.
• Seek further funding to support the future of this work and increase collaboration and meetings.
• Taking future work in this area beyond the descriptive and into the development of health systems and intervention studies.

CALL FOR EXPRESSION OF INTEREST FOR A PROGRAM LEADER ROLE

The Lowitja Institute is looking for a suitably qualified researcher to undertake a Program Leader role on our Healthy Communities and Settings program (Program 2), with a particular responsibility its scientific leadership. This role will work with an established team. Responsibilities include providing scientific leadership and advice on all activities undertaken within the scope of the program; undertaking research activity as agreed and producing research reports, publications and presentations; contributing to the development of capacity building and research transfer processes; as part of a team, supervise personnel—including students—working on program activities and research projects; support the team to keep financial, technical and research records in the approved form; contribute to the management and reporting of any issues which may impact on the achievement of deliverables; provide any other reports or information as may be requested by the National Institute for Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander Health Research Ltd (NIATSHR) within ten business days of the request unless otherwise agreed; participate in the CRC review that will be commissioned by the Commonwealth in the third year, 1 Jan 2012–30 June 2012.
The program goal is an improved understanding of the determinants of Indigenous health through the development and use of tools that more accurately measure enabling environments for improved Indigenous Australian health and wellbeing outcomes.
For more information and selection criteria, please visit: <http://www.lowitja.org.au/announcements/call-expressions-interest-program-leader-role>.
Closing date is 31 December 2010.

DEPUTY VICE-CHANCELLOR (INDIGENOUS STRATEGY AND SERVICES), THE UNIVERSITY OF SYDNEY

The Senior Executive Group (SEG) has recently finalised the University of Sydney’s response to the external Review of Indigenous Education at the University, completed in August 2009.
One of the key recommendations of this review was the appointment of a senior person with responsibility for Indigenous affairs.
As a result, a new position of Deputy Vice-Chancellor (Indigenous Strategy and Services) will soon be advertised with a view to the successful applicant commencing in this important new role as early as possible in 2011.
As a member of and working in collaboration with all other members of the Senior Executive Group and key units across the University, the DVC (Indigenous Strategy and Services) will initially be responsible for finalising the integrated Indigenous Participation, Engagement, Education and Research Strategy which is part of the University’s Strategic Plan 2011–15.
From 2012 onwards the new DVC will be responsible for leading the implementation of a comprehensive Indigenous Strategy, which will be agreed by SEG in 2011 and supported by the University as a strategic priority.
The reports of the SEG Working Group that informed SEG’s consideration of these matters make compelling reading. Please visit the Review of Indigenous Education website <http://sydney.edu.au/learning/RIE/rie.shtml> where all the reports are available for download.

Julia Gillard sets Indigenous report card in stone, by Jeff Waters, ABC The Drum, 9 December. ‘Prime Minister Julia Gillard has cemented her predecessor Kevin Rudd's Indigenous health reporting initiative, continuing his efforts to close the vast gap between health outcomes for Indigenous and non-Indigenous Australians.

A spokesman for the Prime Minister has told The Drum that she will continue Mr Rudd's recent tradition of making a "Closing the Gap Statement to Parliament" early in the 2011 sitting period...

Now, by outlining an intention to continue with what are widely called "report cards", Julia Gillard has established a tradition that future Labor leaders will find impossible to shy away from, and which will certainly put a great deal of pressure on any up-coming Coalition prime ministers as well...

While the report cards have, in the past, been described by some as inadequate or superficial, Melbourne University's Professor of Indigenous Health Ian Anderson says they are entirely beneficial.

“They do two very significant things," he said, "first of all they keep a national focus on what we’re doing around Indigenous health [and] the second is that it sends an accountability signal that I think is very important.”

Early Successes in Efforts to ‘Close the Gap’, media release by the Minister for Indigenous Health, 9 December. ‘A new report on the Australian Government’s multi-million dollar commitment to tackling chronic disease in Indigenous communities shows positive progress is being made.

Minister for Indigenous Health Warren Snowdon said a new report on the Australian Government’s multi-million dollar commitment to tackling chronic disease in Indigenous communities shows positive progress is being made.
The Indigenous Chronic Disease Package Annual Progress Report 2009–10 is the first government report detailing the achievements and progress of the historic commitment to help close the gap in life expectancy between Indigenous and non-Indigenous Australians…’

Dr Noritta Morseu-Diop the first Torres Strait Islander to earn a PhD from University of Queensland, James O’Loan, The Courier-Mail, 13 December. ‘Born on a mission and always "on a mission". Dr Noritta Morseu-Diop is living proof that self-belief and hard work can overcome any challenge. Today, in front of indigenous Elders, she becomes only the fifth Torres Strait Islander in history to receive a PhD from an Australian university. Her PhD thesis findings aim to create a more effective and humane criminal justice system in Queensland, which is currently blighted by an over-representation of indigenous people.’ Full story at: <http://www.couriermail.com.au/news/queensland/dr-noritta-morseu-diop-the-first-torres-strait-islander-to-earn-a-phd-from-university-of-queensland/story-e6freoof-1225969797608>.

SCHOLARSHIPS, AWARDS, FUNDING, GRANTS & TENDERS

Postgraduate Scholarship on Indigenous Chronic Disease and Health Professional Education

Several full-time postgraduate scholarships are available over the next three years for suitably qualified candidates to undertake research studies leading to a Masters (Research) or Doctorate on exploring how health professional education can reduce disparities in chronic disease care and improve outcomes for Indigenous populations. Indicative degrees available include Master of Philosophy, Master of Education, Doctor of Philosophy, Doctor of Education, Master of Aboriginal Health, Master of Health Professional Education. Research areas are Indigenous Health, Health Professional Education, inter-professional education, medical education, e-health.

These scholarships are part of the Educating for Equity project that compares, builds and shares experiences and approaches to Indigenous health teaching and learning in the area of chronic disease. A major focus of the project is to ensure that the lessons from the project are translated into practice. The research will make a substantial and enduring contribution to improving the quality of health care for Indigenous people with chronic disease and thus health outcomes.

Applicants should have a Bachelors degree with Honours or a Masters Degree in Indigenous health, education, public health, social science, or a related discipline. Experience/background in qualitative research and/or knowledge of Indigenous health and health professional education would be an advantage. Applicants must be Australian citizens, Australian permanent residents or New Zealand citizens. The successful applicant/s will be in a position to commence their candidature subject to successful enrolment in a research Masters or PhD through the University of Western Australia, University of Melbourne or University of Queensland.

The standard-rate NHMRC scholarship stipend (including support) is $33.488 in 2010 (tax exempt) and may be renewed for the standard duration of their course (3 years for PhD), subject to satisfactory progress. Indigenous applicants should also seek out targeted supports through the Indigenous studies centres at the respective Universities.
